MIAMI VALLEY HORN CLUB PLANS SPRING CONCERT

DAYTON, Ohio, May 11, 1989--The Miami Valley Horn Club, under the direction of Richard Chenoweth, will perform its annual spring concert on Wednesday, May 17 at 7:30 p.m. in the Music and Theatre Building on the University of Dayton campus. The concert will be held in Room 104.

A wide variety of horn ensemble music will be performed, including works by Johann Strauss, Richard Wagner, Franz Schubert, J.S. Bach, Ludwig van Beethoven and Gioacchino Antonio Rossini. The informal concert is free and open to the public.

The Miami Valley Horn Club is comprised of area horn players who have an interest in performing music for the horn and promoting public interest in the horn and its repertoire. Now in its seventh year of existence, the club has in the past helped sponsor workshops and recitals by such eminent artists as Barry Tuckwell, Philip Farkas, Walter Lawson, Lowell Greer and Steve Gross.

Recent sponsorship activities of the group include partial support of the American Horn Competition, an international solo horn competition held May 4-7 at UD. Conductor Chenoweth is assistant professor of music at UD and co-principal horn player of the Dayton Philharmonic Orchestra.

Members of the club most recently performed at the Dayton Art Institute as part of the "Family Day of the Arts," sponsored by the Miami Valley Arts Council. The Miami Valley Horn Club is a non-profit organization.
